Hi there! We are two sweet brothers in search of a new home after our owner surrendered us due to financial difficulties. We're both about nine years of age and very loving. We have been together for all of our nine years so it would be super duper if we could find a home together - but if we have to go separately in order to find a new loving home, that would be okay. Popper is the most Maine Coon looking of the two of us. He weighs about 12 pounds and has long brown tabby fur. Popper is big on taking naps (who isn't, right?) but when he's awake he enjoys rubbing against his person's legs and getting petted and having his ear scratched. His likes toys (including the laser) but really prefers playing with a person to playing all by himself. Motown has beautiful black hair and is a more petite nine pounds. He also really loves hanging out with people and playing and being held and cuddled and is a great lap cat. Both of us are very affectionate and not the type to hiss or scratch and are even good with other kitties (we're not sure about dogs only because we haven't met many).
